The Concert Ticket Queuing App

TIXIE

The ticket queuing app

Say hey to Tixie, the concert ticket queuing app that gets it. No more chaotic countdowns, random glitches, or disappearing seats. Tixie makes scoring tickets simple, fair, and actually fun. Whether you're trying to snag front row or just don't want to miss out, Tixie holds your spot in line without the stress. Because getting tickets should feel exciting, not like a full-time job.

page

Here you can see which artists concerts are coming up, and recently announced. There is also a search feature where you can put in your location, ideal dates, and artists you would like to see.

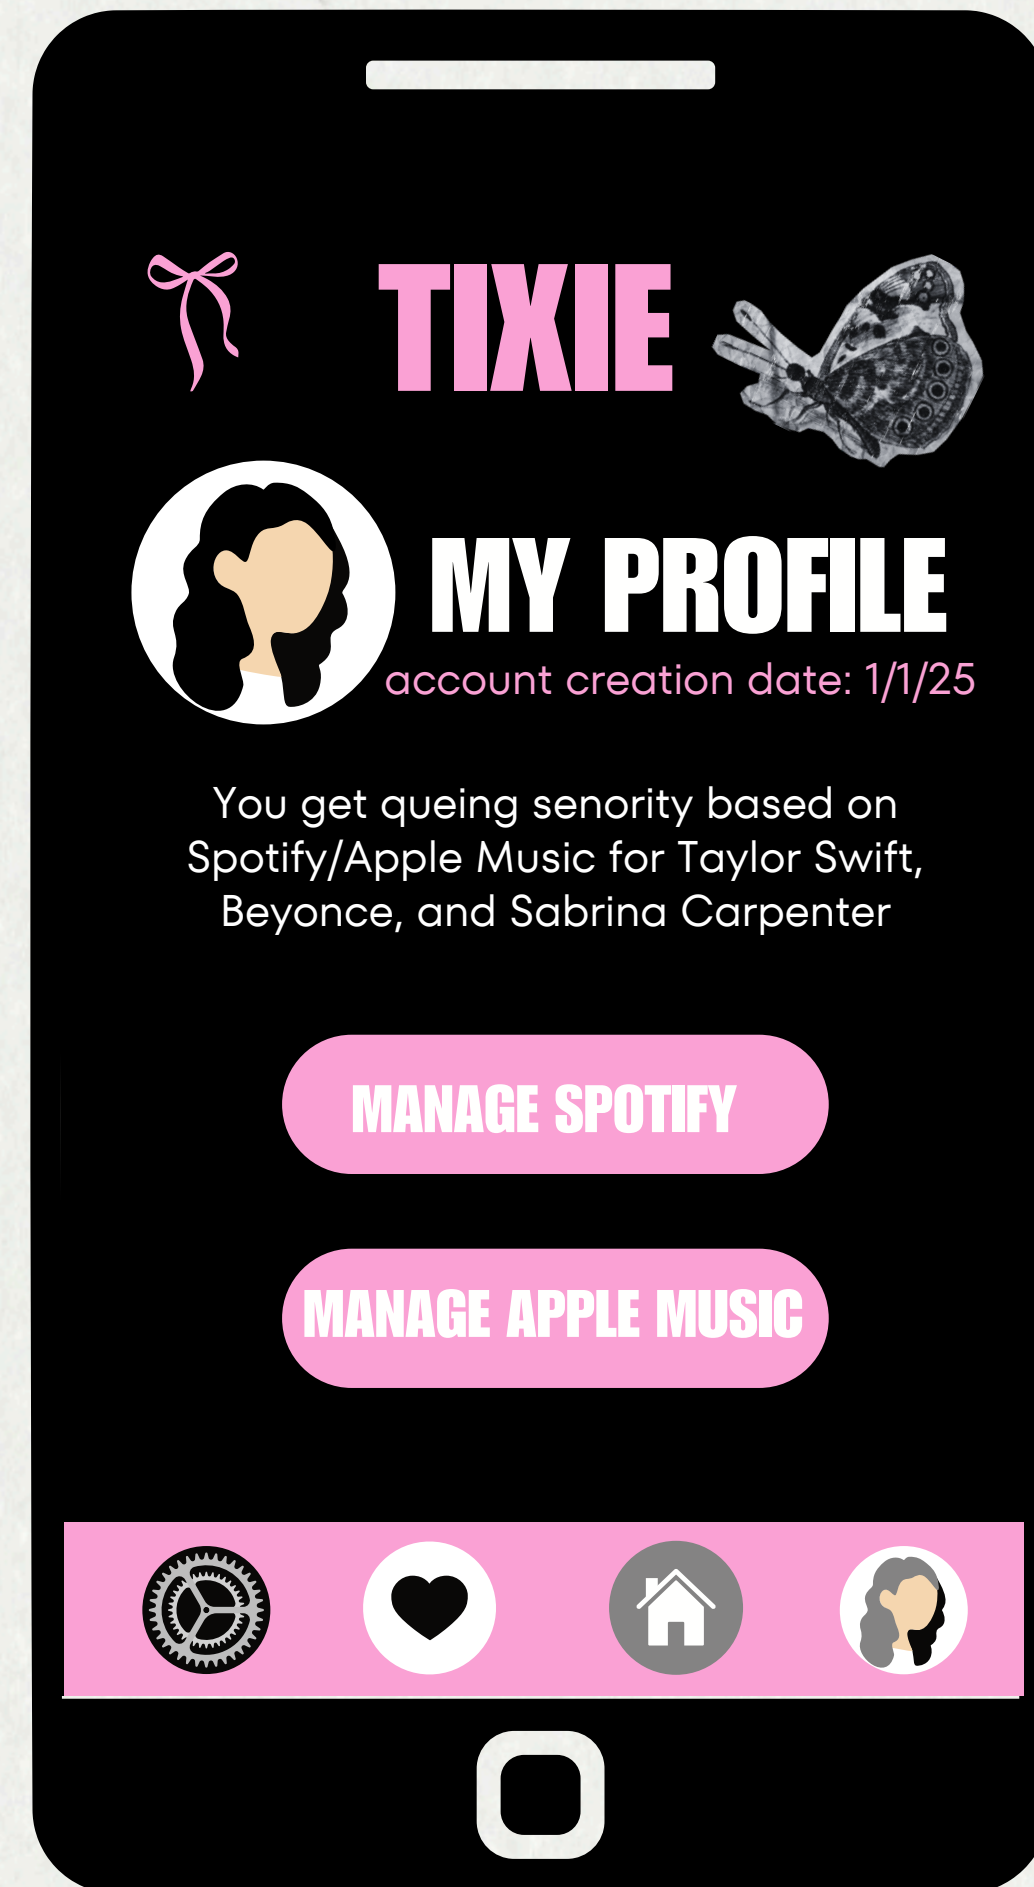

PROFILE

page

Here you can edit your profile picture, account name, and manage the connections with Spotify or Apple Music so we can put you in the ticket que's accordingly.

PROBLEM

solving

Why Tixie > the rest?

Because we actually care about the fans. Unlike other ticket platforms that let bots and randoms snatch up seats, Tixie connects directly to your Spotify and Apple Music, so real, long-time listeners get priority access. If you've been streaming that artist for years, you'll be closer to the stage than someone who just added one song to a playlist last week. It's fair, fan-first, and finally makes sense. No stress, no drama, just vibes and verified listeners getting the love they deserve.

Tixie doesn't just sell tickets, it solves the problem of fake fans, unfair drops, and chaotic queues by making sure the people who've actually been listening get the access they've earned.

GROUP VS PERSONAL

project

Being in Group 3

I had a great time working on this queing idea with my group. working with others meant being able to bounce off of eachother and pick other peoples brains with questions. the result allowed us to really iron out a solid plan.

Working Solo

The main perk of working on my own was being able to work on my own personal schedule. I also got to make it my own, and use my creativity to fine tune the company's aesthetic. I had a blast.
